Like all of us who travel to a strange place from a home we love, children are naturally more connected to Home than to earth when they arrive. They've just made a trip from one dimension to another, after all, so it makes all the sense in the world that they're still tuned to the higher frequency of the Other Side. Of course they can see and hear residents of the spirit world. They were residents of it themselves not long ago. In fact, like all of us, they're far more accustomed to living There than here. I don't care how many times we've reincarnated, or how long each of those incarnations lasted, our total number of years on earth are a blink of an eye compared to our eternity at Home.

"I have just finished Making Sweet Lemonade by Pat Schulz. It is a captivating story, a worthwhile story and a story well told by the author. She has taken her life's journey and opened it up for the reader, while simultaneously bringing the reader along in her faith journey. The journeys and stories are deftly intertwined and totally delineated for the reader. I learned from this book. I learned a lot. I have already recommended it to friends for both motivational and inspirational reading."
